Day 1 – 3rd November

9:00-9:05 | Welcome remarks by conference chair Tanya Richard, COO and conference chair, Innovation Forum

9:05-9:25 | Opening farmer discussion

Farmers sit at the heart of resilient commodity supply chains, yet profitability remains one of the sector's greatest challenges. This opening discussion explores how sustainability requirements, traceability demands and due diligence expectations can be aligned with farmer economics, and how markets and finance can better reward the production of high-quality, sustainable commodities.

Speakers:

- Kenneth Barigye, managing director, Mountain Harvest
- Cheptoek Moreen, Coffee Farmer (Uganda)

Moderator:
Tanya Richard, COO and conference chair, Innovation Forum

9:25-9:55 | Executive discussion
Creating value through sustainability: Driving efficiency, resilience and growth across the value chain

Global markets are being reshaped by economic uncertainty, resource pressures and rising expectations from customers, investors and regulators. Leading companies are responding by making sustainability a driver of business transformation, performance and growth.

Speaker:

- Bertrand Conqueret, chief procurement officer and president global supply chain, Henkel
- Roel van Poppel, chief sustainability officer, ofi

Moderator:
Tanya Richard, COO and conference chair, Innovation Forum

9:55-10:35 | Panel
Staying competitive: Why sourcing and sustainability strategies must adapt together

The old sourcing playbook is under strain. The model that prioritised cost, scale and efficiency is under pressure from tighter margins, volatile supply chains and increasing regulatory requirements.

At the same time, climate disruption and geopolitical pressures are reinforcing the relationship between sustainability, risk management and business resilience.

Speakers:

- Laura Schacht, head of sustainability and external affairs, Suntory Beverage & Food Europe
- Francesco Tramontin, vice president global public affairs and institutional affairs and corporate communications area Europe, Ferrero
- Michael Roots, grower relations lead, Almond Board of California

Moderator:
Ian Welsh, co-founder and chair, Innovation Forum

10:35-11:15 | Speed networking break

11:15-11:55 | Panel
Nature and biodiversity risk: What the latest data means for supply chains and production

According to Ceres research, nature loss is costing the food sector an estimated $253 billion annually. Nature risk is increasingly becoming commercial risk.

While climate has dominated sustainability discussions for years, businesses are recognising that nature degradation can have equally significant impacts on supply security, productivity and profitability.

Speakers:

- Reineke van Riemsdijk, head of quality, safety, security, environment and sustainability NL, Nespresso
- Anne Mette Christiansen, head of sustainability strategy, Arla Foods
- Romain Bernard, raw materials buyer, LUSH

Moderator:
Ingrid Tungen, head of deforestation-free markets, Rainforest Foundation Norway

11:55-12:40 | Panel
Who pays for the transition? Rethinking risk and capital in commodity supply chains

The capital needed to support the agricultural transition exists, yet significant barriers remain to deploying finance at scale. Sustainability-linked products are slowing, blended finance programmes remain limited, and farmer finance remains difficult to scale.

This session will examine who should bear the risks associated with the transition and what it will take to unlock meaningful investment across commodity value chains.

Speakers

- Paul O'Connor, head of EMEA sustainable finance, debt capital markets, JP Morgan
- Mayke Geradts, global sustainability lead, commodities, food and agriculture, ING Bank
- Heske Verburg, managing director Europe, Solidaridad

Moderator

Ruth Thomas, head of nature positive agriculture, WWF

Policy alignment: How linking business strategy to national climate roadmaps can accelerate the shift to net zero

As countries turn climate commitments into policies, incentives and regulation, companies are facing a more complex operating environment. For organisations operating across multiple geographies and supply chains, understanding where to align and where to invest is becoming increasingly challenging.

This session will explore how businesses can align with national climate strategies while strengthening competitiveness and resilience.

Speakers

- Tilmann Silber, head of net zero, Barry Callebaut
- David Laborde, director, agrifood economics and policy division, FAO

Moderator

Judy Kuszewski, founding partner, Evermore

10:05-10:40 **|
From policy to procurement: How to embed climate risk into purchasing decisions and supplier relationships

Climate targets may be set in the boardroom, but procurement teams are where commitments succeed or fail. As climate impacts increasingly affect supply, cost and availability, procurement teams are being asked to treat climate risk as a business risk.

This discussion will explore how organisations can integrate climate considerations into sourcing decisions, supplier engagement and purchasing practices.

Financial risk: How to align sustainability and finance to drive real decisions and real resources

Sustainability and finance functions increasingly need to speak the same language. Yet many organisations continue to struggle to translate climate and nature risks into financial decision-making and capital allocation processes.

This session will examine how leading organisations are embedding sustainability considerations into investment decisions and business strategy.

Speakers

- Sonya Likhtman, stewardship director, Federated Hermes
- Peter van der Warf, head of active ownership, Robeco
- Arthur Krebbers, managing director, sustainable finance, NatWest

Moderator

Ruth Thomas, head of nature positive agriculture, WWF

12:10-12:40 | Case study session
Sustainability beyond silos: Can the landscapes approach really catalyse cross-sector collaboration?

Landscape approaches have moved from the margins into the mainstream. Once viewed primarily as sustainability initiatives, they are increasingly expected to deliver climate resilience, nature protection, improved livelihoods and long-term supply security.

Through practical case studies, this session will explore how landscape partnerships are being designed and implemented to tackle shared challenges across commodity value chains.

Speakers

- Angela Tejada Chavez, director of sustainable sourcing cocoa, The Hershey Company
- Ethan Budiansky, director sustainable commodities, Wildlife Conservation Society

Moderator

Tanya Richard, COO and conference chair, Innovation Forum
